PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT: Private Philanthropy for Development: Data for Action

16:25-16:45

This session will provide an overview of the key findings and recommendations from the second volume of the OECD flagship Private Philanthropy for Development Report. Drawing on data from more than 200 large philanthropic organisations providing cross-border and domestic philanthropy in developing countries, this presentation will offer on new perspectives on philanthropy's scale, strategies and ambitions to support sustainable development in support of Agenda 2030 and beyond.

- Bathylle Missika, Head of Networks, Partnerships and Gender Division, OECD Development Centre

PANEL DISCUSSION: Philanthropy as the next frontier for 2030 and beyond: Reconciling the gap between philanthropic ambitions and effective delivery

16:45-17:30

Private philanthropy for development has bold goals. Many foundations aim to go beyond palliative solutions to alleviate poverty by using their funding strategically to dismantle some of the root barriers to economic and social development. But what foundations can give to developing countries is typically dwarfed by the resources of other players, such as for example the official development providers. Building on the key findings from the report, this panel discussion will explore to what extent and how foundations are mobilising by investing their assets and philanthropic capital to create additional resources for development; how they are strategically advocating to amplify and sustain their impact; and how they are striving to become learning organisations and produce knowledge that can improve development policy and practice through monitoring and evaluation.

- Anne-Birgitte Albrechtsen, CEO, The LEGO Foundation
- Natasha Ridge, Executive Director, Sheikh Saud bin Saqr Al Qasimi Foundation
- Christine Looney, Deputy Director, Mission Investments, Ford Foundation
- Moderator: Hisham Mundol, Chief Advisor, India, Environmental Defense Fund
