ABOUT

During COVID19 and the challenges of the ongoing political crisis in Israel, I represented 400,000 students before the government and decision-makers, and promoted aid policies to prevent a "lost generation". I believe that the key to making quality public decisions is to take future generations into account, and let them have their say at every stage of the process.

“As those who will bear the future burden of the crisis, there is a duty to involve young people in the current decision-making processes.”
