

David BARTOLINI is Senior Economist in the Local Employment, Skills, and Social Innovation Division of the OECD Centre for Entrepreneurship, SMEs, Regions, and Cities (CFE). He coordinates the work on the OECD Job Creation and Local Economic Development biennial publication, and the empirical work on local employment and local economic development. David holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Essex (UK), and started his career as University Lecturer of Economics and Public Finance. He joined the OECD in 2012 working in the Regional Development Policy Division, where he contributed to several National and Regional Territorial Reviews. In 2015, he moved to the Economics Department where he contributed to the taxation and inclusive growth project, taxation and firms' productivity project, as well as the work of the OECD Network on Fiscal Relations across Levels of Government. Besides contributing to OECD publications, David has published his research in international academic journals, such as the Journal of Public Economic Theory, the Annals of Regional Science, and the B.E. Journal of Economic Analysis and Policy.
