

Mike Coombes is Professor of Geographic Information at the Centre for Urban and Regional Development Studies, Newcastle University, UK. His main activities and responsibilities are to design, manage and undertake research projects. Current and recent research includes a study on “Travel-to-Work Analyses” (Office for National Statistics); the ESRC/UK Government study on “Spatial Economic Research Centre” and the UK Government study on “Assessing the local and regional impacts of international migration”. He is member of the European Migration Network: UK National Network and of the expert panel of the UK Government Regeneration and Economic Development Expert Panel. Mike Coombes has published several papers on migration and regional development.