

David A. Jaeger is a professor of economics at the University of Cologne and the City University of New York Graduate Center, and has held permanent and visiting positions at the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the College of William and Mary, Princeton University, the University of Bonn, the Ruhr Graduate School of Economics, and the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Public Goods.

In 1995, he was the first recipient of the W. E. Upjohn Institute Dissertation Award and in 2003 he received a research fellowship from the Alexander von Humboldt Stiftung. His research focuses on immigration and migration, education, conflict, and applied econometrics, and has been published in the American Economic Review, the Journal of the American Statistical Association, the Review of Economics and Statistics, the Journal of Business and Economic Statistics, the Journal of Labor Economics, and the Quarterly Journal of Political Science, among others.